“ Berlye, some of the best memories of my life are with you, Tonya and me sitting around the kitchen table and talking for hours. You always opened your home to me as if it were my second home. You told stories that just caught my attention. I had such respect for you. You raised an amazingly beautiful, sweet, tender, intelligent and silly/funny daughter. Everyone adores her just the way I remember seeing so vividly in your eyes.
I will always have you in my heart. I know you're an angel now.
Love forever,
Elizabeth

“ Mom,
Eternity couldn't provide enough time and space to tell you how much I miss you and love you. I know that for the first time in my life I stand all alone in the world...you told me this day would come and we talked about it a few times. Remember when I'd cry at your kitchen table while asking you how you wanted your final arrangements to be? That day has come and I'm like a little lost cub without it's momma. Remember how you always called me your "cub"? It's almost more than I can handle, the sadness and emptiness....I know I have Tiger and Jennifer but it's not the same as having my Momma. You always told me that one day I'd have to look down at you for the last time and a thousand things would run through my mind...and they have. Love, guilt, sorrow, loneliness, memories both good and bad. I remember when I put you through hell as a teenager and you told me that I didn't realize it then but someday I'd realize that you were the best friend I'd ever have. I realized that years ago once I was grown and I miss my best friend. Over the last year, since you've been sick there have been so many times that I wanted to call you at 2am just to chat like we used to or to tell you something wonderful that happened or something funny and sometimes I just wanted to cry to you because I was hurt over something somebody did but I couldn't because you were sick in the nursing home. You knew before you got sick about two of my friends and the downfall of our friendships and then when you got sick, I didn't have you anymore either. I just wanted my best friend, my momma to get well and listen to me! How in the world am I gonna get along in life without you? I'm so mad and hurt! YOU are the only person who will ever love me unconditionally and I feel so insecure about the future because you're gone now. You were such a wonderful mother to me, you did without so I could have and that's a fact. You were selfless when it came to me and I know that and I want you to know how grateful I am for all you've done for me and all you've given me in life. I'm so glad you ruled with an iron fist when it came to raising me. Thanks to you I grew up with discipline and I definitely knew wrong from right and the truth from a lie. Thanks for teaching me to be polite and say "please and thank you", you taught me to be grateful for things and to have integrity in everyday life. Now with the cancer...you fought it tooth and nail Momma! I remember when I'd pick you up for your chemo treatments last winter and you'd have on your little pink furry coat and that chemo bag over your shoulder and you'd trudge out into the snow ready to kick cancer's butt but your little body was just not strong enough to withstand it. That first surgery was brutal for you, I don't know how you did it for as long as you did. I just don't think you realize how much I miss you and am going to miss you for the rest of my life. I'd give anything to make all the wrongs I did right and I'm so sorry for all the wrong things I've said and done to you. I told you many, many times that when you get to heaven to do all you can to cross time and space to come see me every now and then and I hope you can do that. I can't wait to see you, if it's in a dream, at the foot of my bed in the middle of the night or in some other way. I hope Mamaw and Papaw and Daddy were there when you got to heaven to meet you and welcome you. I realize you're not feeling any pain or sorrow anymore and that it must be beautiful up there or out there or wherever it is and I'm happy that you're not suffering anymore. I'm gonna go for now but know this, I love you more than anything in the world and I always will, for all eternity. Peace be with you now Momma. I love you.
