“ My mom is missed every day. My relationship with my mother from 1990 was unique. For 30 years my family and I were away in Scotland as missionaries. We only came home to America for furlough or for special occasions. During these trips back to America, I only saw my mother for a day or two. Most of our contact during those years was by mail, email, or phone calls. I always knew she prayed for my family and me, and she was always available by phone, etc. It is hard for me to accept the idea I can no longer reach out to her.

On one of my last furloughs, my mother and I had a road trip together to visit with my brother and sisters. The memories of that trip are a bit vague, but I would not have missed that road trip for anything.

My mother prayed for me constantly. It would take a long time to tell of all the things she did for me. She saw to it that I was educated (somewhat against my will). She got me involved in music. She took me to church. She kept her eyes on me and worked to keep me from going wild (which I was prone to do).

I had a good Mom and I miss her.

“ Grandma Devers was a special lady. I am one of her granddaughters. She taught us how to set a proper table and eat green beans at every meal. She would bake for days during Christmas holidays. She made pork chops, Mac and cheese, and corn bread pudding every time we visited. I loved the smell when walking in like coffee and memories. The garage had a home smell of dirt and gasoline...should be a terrible smell but whenever I smell it now it's like walking into Grandmas house. Grandma Devers was the thing that kept us a family and will be surely missed.
