“ In 1984 I was playing the survival game (now called paintball) with a group of strangers. We decided to start a summer league. When all the young guys joined up together ,This bald and incorrectly proportioned (short & fat) guy called us older folks over and introduced himself as Charlie Poteet and said he'd Captain a team. We got together a few days later to set up the team and give it a name, Charlie came up with “Friends Are Real Treats”, aka F.A.R.T.S. Little did we know how long and tight our friendships would become. Now 37 years later, most of us have remained very close friends. Now in the eve of our lives I believe we have been blessed with true, loving friendships. Myself, these have been the closest friends in my adult life. Charlie now joins a list of too many friends we have lost. I regret now that I have not thanked them for how much joy their friendships have given me, and I've loved them like a brother. Charlie years ago called himself incorrectly proportioned, I call him the true definition of the word friend. I will always miss him dearly. Reno’
