“ Though I hadn't seen you in years, the joy your arrival brought your mother has always been seared in my soul. Reading about your friends and the joy you brought others in your short time here, especially cousin Brandon, provides some small comfort. But it only underscores the heartbreak of your loss for everyone, including them. At this time, I think most of your mother and your daughter. They may never recover from your loss, but I hope they can adjust, and one day rediscover your infectious joy and channel it through themselves for others to feel once again.

With love and deepest sympathies, Cari
