“ Waves of sadness have come and gone for me as I reflected on my youth and the memories made with my dear, life-long friend after learning of his death. I don't remember ever not knowing him. We played in back yards, climbed trees, slept on mats during nap time at Elsie's Daycare and grew up in that little white baptist church together. He was the brother I didn't have. As we got older, he sometimes led me astray to try things we knew we shouldn't be doing, but all the cool kids climbed up on that concrete vocational building sign or sat on the rail at the little concrete bridge and had a smoke. I knew his knock on my bedroom window when he was in trouble and needed to talk. Countless hours we spent together talking about religion, music, art, life, family and where we fit in. Not everyone knew it, because he hid it under his leather jacket, but he had a very tender and loving, kind heart. I'm so sorry his life was troubled and he is gone so early. I will miss knowing he's there when I round that particular corner he lived on and will probably look to see if he's out for the rest of my life because it's habit. Just a couple of weeks ago, I stopped and we chatted. If I had known he needed it, I'd have gotten out of my car, stayed a bit longer and given him a hug. I hope he is forgiven and has everlasting peace. My prayers are with his mother Nell Markwell, his brothers and the rest of his family and friends.... My love to you always Danny

You have our deepest sympathy at this very sad time. We all were shocked and saddened to hear of the loss of Danny. Danny was a part of the Piccolo family which makes it even harder to comprehend his passing. We have many fond memories of him. He will be missed by us all.
