“ I was very lucky to have met Eric, back in 1999, when I worked as an usher at Showcase Cinemas. I learned from him that he and I had a lot in common in regards to interests in science fiction, television, the cinema, and screenwriting in general. When the SC closed down in 2004, we lost contact with each other. It was by lucky chance that we reconnected more than a decade later through social media. After that, we got together with his son - and sometimes his grand-daughter - to attend the latest film opening. From 2016 to 2021, we saw the conclusion of the SW saga, the Blade Runner sequel, the new Halloween movie, and many other movies. We also got together for lunch at times and talked about what was going on in our lives and what the world was coming too on the socio-political front.

He was a great friend and truly someone that I could talk too about anything. We were planning on writing a screenplay together and attending the next Halloween film premiere, two days before he sadly passed away. I'm still haunted by the fact that I was one of the last people that he spoke with before he died.

I will truly miss him. And I will always think about him.

I'll see you soon, Eric. We'll have a lot to catch up on in heaven.
God Bless you, my dear friend.

“ Eric spent many days and nights at my house from when I was a baby until now. His wife and my mom were childhood best friends and still friends now. He and I talked at church all the time about Big Brother, one of our favorite TV shows. He was so funny and he will very much be missed. -Kara Roper
