“ My father was a walking embodiment of Louisville during a golden era in time. From the way he spoke, to the values that he carried, this was evident to anyone who had the pleasure of knowing him. This man lived and breathed everything Louisville, from his avid love for the UofL Cardinals, Bearno’s supreme pizzas, The George Rodger’s Clark Park (his second home) where he spent a significant portion of his life creating the most cherished of memories, to one of his first jobs at a local KFC where he told me he met the Colonial Sanders himself (in which my dad mentioned witnessing the Colonial complaining about the franchise ruining his original recipe. His impersonation of that moment always gave a good laugh.) It was through him I was introduced and immersed into the local culture of Thunder Over Louisville, The Kentucky Derby, the city’s historical French Origins, and everything in between. Anything he did, he would do wearing a flannel and blue jeans.

Despite his struggles, he always kept others in his thoughts and reminded all of us how very blessed we are in the moment. “Make tomorrow better than the day before.” He would always tell me. He never asked for much, but only to watch his grandchildren grow up.

Although he is no longer here, he will always live on through songs, smells, memories, and tiny reminders we experience in our day to day lives. When the girls and I look over from our side of the Ohio to the Bluegrass State, that city skyline will always remain in our minds as “Grandpa Harold’s City.”

Fly high dad, you are pain free now. Forever in our minds and hearts you will live. We will never forget you! 🌸💖🍷

With Love from your daughter and granddaughters,

Tania, Seraphine, and Kiyannah.

“ I send my condolences to all family.
I cant say a one specific memory with uncle harold i have soooo sooo many memories of him and things he taught me even at a young age.i nvr had one solid single male figure in my life,i had several,and he came into my life and of course everyone has there vices or whatever but he talked to me at a young age all the time pressing in my head how to be a man,how you wont have anything in life if you dont work,how you cant count on others only yourself,and those kind of things stuck with me my whole life,they all ring true to the core and all the lessons he taught me in life were words with meaning and stuck and will always be in my mind forever! I love you all every person that he got to be part of his life.and i give my condolences to everyone as well.ill be here for anyone in what ways that im able to.i

PS

Harold was a very special person. I could see how much he loved Debbie all through the years. I am so thankful that he doesn't have to deal with pain anymore. He's there in Heaven, walking the streets of gold, enjoying the presence of Jesus and all the family that's gone on to be with the Lord! How wonderful for him! The most important thing before we leave this earth is to know our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. We all have a choice, so choose wisely! Choose a blessed life with Jesus!
