“ It is with both sadness and relief that I express these thoughts. My cousin Bill Whitehouse was just about the friendliest most selfless person I have known. He hardly ever met a stranger, and when he did he drew a circle that took them in. He loved his God, his family and he loved life. And he lived it to the fullest-- greeting it every day with open arms and giving of himself in almost every encounter. The thought of this life without Bill brings the sadness. The relief comes when I think about Bill's last few months and how painful the fight for life was for him and for Rosemary. Now it's over. His passing leaves a hollow space, but for those of us who knew him, it's a better world because he passed through.
