“ Christmas is SO HARD without you, brother. I’m so angry this time of year, I don’t know how to deal with you not being here. I speak with you EVERY SINGLE DAY - I speak with you more often than I do the living, and I’m so thankful that you let me know you’re still with me.

I would also like to clear things up. Aaron Sauer is merely a cousin, my brother’s two half brothers and his bio father never had ANYTHING to do with him - my brother was lucky if he saw them a total of ten times in his 38 short years. The only REAL brother my brother ever had was my husband of 20 years, Lynn; the two adored one another. Jeremy and I may have officially been “half siblings” as well, but we grew up together - it was me, my brother, and our mama against the world! And to call us half siblings to our faces, well, those were physically fighting words.

I miss you, dear brother. I know when it’s my time, you will come for me. I love you more than you’ll EVER know ❤️

“ Jeremy was my brother, my only sibling, my protector, and my best friend. I wake up every single morning sobbing, idk how I'll go on. I'll love you forever, little brother. Sleep easy, and when the time comes, I expect you to come get me. I love joy SO MUCH!
