“ I have worked for the Portland Anchor for almost 30 years. It was always a pleasure to receive stories from Doris and Joan about growing up on Lytle Street in Portland and so many of the family members that lived near them. They came to Portland Plaza once to share their stories and they were wonderful memories that they shared. I talked to Joan on the phone from time to time and she always sent me beautiful notes that I always enjoyed reading. I will miss her. She and Doris were a world of knowledge about the Portland community and we always loved putting their stories in the Portland Anchor.

Joan was a very dear friend to my mother, Carolyn Curley Cassady, and all of her sisters and brothers, especially John 'Jack' Curley. It's with much regret that I am only learning of Joan's passing at this time. May she rest in peace and now that her friendship was always treasured by those who knew her.
