“ REDD and I were very good friends. We worked together at Sandvik, and Seamco. We traveled to job sites, and took measurements of existing conveyor belts. One site was in Boston, and we drove up to Salem in our free time to see the sites in witch-town. On the way back to Boston we stopped at a seafood place to eat. It had large windows overlooking the Bay Area. I ordered a lobster, which was the first ever for me. REDD tried to show me how to use the clamps to break the shell. I was about 8 feet from the window, and when I broke the shell, it splattered the window. I asked REDD if that was normal. He said no you Simpleton! We also had seats together at Cardinal football stadium, and tailgating in the big parking lot. He would park his red truck, and put speakers on the roof attached to his stereo for our entertainment. He was a very popular guy. We will always love and miss him. Rest In Peace my friend . Gary Martin
